Lydia: Come here, Jane. We're gonna make a special Halloween video.

Jane: (enters frame) Okay, but Halloween's not 'til tomorrow.

Lydia: Right, but when they see this, it will be tomorrow. Besides, Halloween isn't a day of the year, it's a state of mind.

Jane: Oh, is it? How so?

Lydia: Any time you pretend to be someone you're not, that is Halloween.

Jane: Well, that makes sense.

Lydia: Any time you accept candy from a stranger, that is Halloween.

Jane: That makes less sense.

Lydia: Any time you ride on the back of a wagon, covered in hay, with your friends, through the dark woods, as a hobo chases you with an axe, that is Halloween. Any time you change from regular, everyday, boring job to sexy, boring job, that is Halloween.

Jane: Well, now I feel bad that I'm not in costume.

Lydia: But you are in costume. Everyone's wearing a costume. Every day. Right now, you're dressed as a fierce wanderer, adventuring through a foreign land.

Jane: (laughs) Are you feeling okay? You're not talking like yourself.

Lydia: Duh, that's the point! Today I can be whoever I want! Or tomorrow. Which by then will be today. Or yesterday. Maybe then it will be yesterday. (pauses) I think I ate too much candy corn.

Jane: That's okay. I think they get the point. Happy Halloween!

Lydia: Happy Halloween!
