Lydia: Hey, I'm still alive. Did not get murdered by the man in the attic. Mary has some serious trust issues. I mean, how are you supposed to meet fun new people if you think everyone's going to kill you all the time. Ridic. Ooh-speaking of Miss Ridic. Hey, Mary, wow, looking even more emotastic than usual. Yikes, what gives?

Mary: [sighs] Some dumb bitches I went to high school with saw your little video blog and started teasing me about Eddy. The boy from the mall?

Lydia: Oh my god, Mary, that's perf, he'll see it and totes ask you out!

Mary: No it's not perf, Lydia, it's embarrassing and it shouldn't be any of their business. Even some random kid from England has been making GIFs about it.

Lydia: Everybody loves a good GIF. Well, if you want my advice, I always solve my problems in these three easy steps. One: Alcohol, Two: Pretend they don't exist, Three: More Alcohol.

Mary: Sounds healthy.

Lydia: It's a universal truth.

Mary: Maybe for you, I don't drink.

Lydia: [laughs] Oh my god! [laughs more] Oh my god, you're so precious.

Mary: No really, I don't drink.

Lydia: For reals? What do you do for fun? [Mary picks up book] Ookay, what do you do for fun that involves other people?

Mary: I'm perfectly capable of entertaining myself.

Lydia: Eww! TMI, cuz, TMI.

Mary: Wait, what?

Lydia: Idea! I'm going to peer pressure you into drinking with me.

Mary: Have fun entertaining yourself.

Lydia: Heeeey! No, both our parents are out for the night, you clearly need some cheering up, just trust me!

Mary: As far as I can throw you.

Lydia: Alright, you leave me no choice. Peer pressure, peer pressure, peer pressure, peer pressure... [Lydia continues to say "peer pressure"]

Mary: Seriously? You're just going to keep doing that? [Lydia gets louder] Oh my god! Oh my god, stop it's not going to work! Lydia, oh my god!
