Lydia: Hey guys! So, I'm sitting at home, listening to Mary's terrible attempt at playing the piano, when I realized you know what makes everything better? Going to the mall! Am I right?!

Mary: Didn't your mom tell you to stop spending money unnecessarily?

Lydia: Oh, this was very necessary. Plus, I met a really hot, single guy, who is definitely into me.

Mary: Denny? He's super gay.

Lydia: Okay, I know you don't like anyone, but you really shouldn't use gay derogatorily. That's not very nice.

Mary: It's not derogatory, he's literally a homosexual, as in he has sex with dudes.

Lydia: Oh. Well, what about that guy you were talking to at the bookstore? He was pretty cute.

Mary: I don't know what you're talking about.

Lydia: Oh my god, you like him! Let me help you! You know, you're kind of related to famous people.

Mary: You're filming yourself and putting it on the internet. That doesn't make you famous, that makes you a narcissist.

Lydia: I'm going to be here for like a whole another week. I could definitely teach you a thing or two.

Mary: I'm really okay, thanks.

Lydia: Oh, it's okay. I can see you crying out for help on the inside. You really don't have to ask.

Mary: Is misinterpretation an expertise for you?

Lydia: You could be my apprentice. I could teach you everything I know about everything and we could spend all our time together!

Mary: I would literally rather die in a fire than do any of that.

Lydia: We'll see!

Mary: Why do I feel like you're concocting some sort of horrible scheme?

Lydia: Horrible scheme? Me? Never! Okay, love you all. Keep watching, bye!
