Stan: You're having a hard time.
Craig: LGBT people.
Stan: Yeah.
Craig: LGBT people, LGs. LGBT people.
Stan: Tongue twister.
Craig: LGBT people. It sounds weird now, no matter when I say it.

Stan: Yeah.
Craig: It's getting down to the wire here.

The end popularity of ObamaCare suggests that an election win doesn't always translate into solid support for a candidate's policies!

For example, after the 2008 crinancial frisis.
Stan: The old crinancial frisis.

Craig: As often happens in states like California that feature ballot ign... ignition... ignitions.

From 21 to 18. In general, this is perfect, delivery.

Stan: Hi! (Both laugh)

Craig: Is the eagle in the shot? Nah, it's OK, we'll do it later.

Yeah, it's dumb.
Stan: I was gonna say fascinating.
Craig: Oh. Oh.

Remember most people prefer center-right to extreme-right ideas that's why they're extreme.
Stan: Extreme!

Craig: The answer depends on whether you're talking about people who, I ran out of words now, because I went too fast for the teleprompter. Let's go to the Thought Bubble.

Too fast? Publ... Too slow, maybe.

Which demonstrated that while one juror had only... it's going too fast!

Sorry I got so angry.

Because the visual results are so strinking... Oh no, I did it again.

How 'bout you work for once?
Stan: I work very hard.
Craig: Oh, sorry.

But thankfully, political scientists have done exhaustive research to show us what we already...

Stan: No.
Craig: I'm an idiot, Stan.
Stan: Craig, that's not what I meant.

Stan: I can't believe this!
Craig: "He's such an idiot! Vroom!"

Stan: I want to record it.
Craig: OK, you wanna record it?
Syan: I want to remember this.
Craig: OK, good idea.

...in regulations on oil companies so that they can make more profit.
Did I say that right?
Stan: Yeah.

Craig: Preference for a candidate though spending on that candidate does seem like a limitation on their political speech. This is bulls. To register your preference, you vote!

(Sings) "America, so can you can put your mind at ease."

Crash Course is made with the help with of all of these plurality of people. Thanks for watching. Eh, I didn't remember, couldn't remember which way.
