Lydia: So I found out my Mom's been paying Mary to tutor me since I got back from visiting Jane. No big. I just don't know why they didn't want to tell me. But I have some other news.

Oh, Mary's here. I can tell you both at the same time! Come here. So, you know how we were aiming for a B on my World History mid-term, well, guess what I got!

Mary: I don't know.

Lydia: Guess! Guess guess guess guess guess-

Mary: Just tell me.

Lydia: An A! An actual real freaking A.

Mary: That's great. Let's go study.

Lydia: What has been going on with you?

Mary: Nothing, I told you.

Lydia: Something's going on with you, you never respond to my texts anymore, you barely say two words to me unless it's about homework and you're just kinda mad at me all the time. That's not what cousins do.

Mary: That's not what cousins do? Really? Says the girl who only wants anything to do with me when her sisters aren't around?

Lydia: What? That's not true.

Mary: Really? Because I'm pretty sure that it is. And you just, you got to a different city without telling me, or cancelling our plans or whatever. I mean, sorry that I'm not too thrilled with you right now.

Lydia: Are you seriously mad at me for that? Are you kidding, you were busy with Eddie.

Mary: Oh my god, one time! One time! I'd blown off plans with him almost every time you've asked me to hang out, and yes I am mad at you for this.

Lydia: What was I supposed to do, you were gone, I went to my sister Jane, big freaking deal.

Mary: yeah, yeah, your sister, I know. What were you supposed to do. You know, you weren't supposed to blow me off again, just because you had better options. But you know what, if that's what cousins do, let me know. Tell your Mom to keep her money, this isn't worth fifteen bucks an hour.

Lydia: Whatever.
