Mary: What are you doing?

Lydia: Getting all the twigs out of my hair.

Mary: Why do you look like you ran through the forest?

Lydia: I was babysitting.

Mary: Somebody left you with their children alone?

Lydia: I got fired, okay?

Mary: Oh, what happened?

Lydia: (sighs) We were playing Orcs and, little people, and, I was the Orc and I was chasing Elijah through the backyard...

Mary: And?

Lydia: And I realized I forgot Dom and Billy were inside so we ran in to check on them and tracked mud and dirt all over the Turkish rug.

Mary: That's not good.

Lydia: (nods) Mr. and Ms. Jackson weren't too thrilled. The older boys were just being so mean to him and I felt really bad for him; he seemed lonely...whatever! Clearly not cut out for babysitting! I was gonna take them out to fro-yo, too. I love fro-yo.

Mary: Oh, I'm sure it was all meant to be.

Lydia: (holds up bag) I know right? Mama Jackson doesn't hide her Xanax very well!

Mary: Lydia, you can't just take other people's drugs!

Lydia: I can when they fire me!

Mary: No! It's immoral and totally dangerous! I mean the, the side effects of Xanax range from, from dizziness, and, and hallucinations, um, um, fast heartbeat, um...

Lydia: Okay...chill out on the Web MD, there, cuz.

(Mary points to trash can; Lydia reluctantly throws bag away.)

Lydia: (sighs) This place sucks. No wonder you like to be alone.

Mary: You wanna get a fro-yo?

Lydia: You eat fro-yo? Isn't that against your religers or something?

Mary: I won't tell if you won't.
